The purpose and objectives:

- To compare and contrast the two types of investors that fund new or early-stage businesses: venture capital and angel investment
- To highlight the advantages and disadvantages of each type of funding for the businesses that seek them
- To provide tips and best practices on how to pitch to angel investors and venture capitalists
- Inform and educate you about the differences and similarities between venture capital and angel investment, and how they can affect the success and growth of the businesses that receive them.

The presentation is also intended to guide and inspire you on how to prepare and present your business ideas and plans to potential investors, and how to overcome the challenges and risks involved.

What is VENTURE CAPITAL?

- Venture capital is a form of outside investment that provides funding to up-and-coming businesses that have high growth potential and innovative ideas.
- Venture capitalists are typically professional firms or funds that invest large sums of money (usually millions of dollars) in exchange for equity or ownership in the company.

- Venture capitalists also offer mentorship, guidance, and access to networks and resources to help the businesses grow and succeed.

Venture Capitalist

Somebody who invests in a business venture

Sam asks his bank for a loan

"Here's $1m, but I want 50% of the firm."

Sam

He asks Auntie May for a loan

Auntie May is rich

Auntie May has become a venture capitalist

What is ANGEL INVESTMENT?

- Angel investment is a form of personal investment that provides funding to new or early-stage businesses that have promising ideas and potential.
- Angel investors are usually wealthy individuals or groups that invest their own money (usually tens or hundreds of thousands of dollars) in exchange for equity or ownership in the company.
- Angel investors also offer valuable advice, feedback, and connections to help the businesses develop and thrive.

VENTURE CAPITAL VS. ANGEL INVESTMENT

Venture capital and angel investment have some similarities and differences in terms of the amount of money they invest, the stage of the business they invest in, the level of control they have over the business, and the expectations they have from the business

VENTURE CAPITAL	ANGEL INVESTMENT
Invests millions of dollars	Invests tens or hundreds of thousands of dollars
Invests in later stages of the business (Series A, B, C, etc.)	Invests in earlier stages of the business (seed, pre-seed, etc.)
Takes a larger equity stake (20% to 40%)	Takes a smaller equity stake (10% to 30%)
Takes an active role in the management of the business	Takes a passive role in the management of the business
Expects a high return on investment (10x to 100x)	Expects a moderate return on investment (2x to 10x)
Has a longer time horizon (5 to 10 years)	Has a shorter time horizon (2 to 5 years)

Advantages and disadvantages of venture capital

Venture capital has some advantages and disadvantages for the businesses that seek it.

- Some of the advantages are:
  - Provides large amounts of capital that can fuel growth and expansion
  - Provides expertise, guidance, and resources that can enhance performance and innovation
  - Provides credibility, reputation, and exposure that can attract more customers, partners, and investors

Some of the disadvantages are:

- Requires giving up a significant portion of ownership and control that can limit autonomy and decision-making
- Requires meeting high standards and expectations that can increase pressure and risk
- Requires aligning with the vision and goals of the investors that can conflict with the original mission and values of the business

ADVANTAGES AND DISADVANTAGES OF ANGEL INVESTMENT

Angel investment has some advantages and disadvantages for the businesses that seek it.

- Some of the advantages are:
  - Provides flexible and accessible capital that can support early-stage development and validation
  - Provides valuable advice, feedback, and connections that can improve product and market fit
  - Provides personal and emotional support that can motivate and inspire the entrepreneurs

Some of the disadvantages are:

- Provides limited amounts of capital that may not be sufficient for scaling and growth
- Provides less formal and structured guidance and resources that may not be optimal for long-term success
- Provides less visibility and recognition that may not generate enough traction and interest from the market and the industry

How to pitch to Venture Capitalists

Pitching to venture capitalists requires a clear and compelling presentation that showcases the problem, the solution, the market, the traction, the team, the financials, and the ask.

- Some of the tips and best practices for pitching to venture capitalists are:
  - Research the venture capital firm and the partner you are pitching to, and tailor your pitch to their interests, expertise, and portfolio.
  - Tell a story that captures the attention, emotion, and imagination of the investors, and demonstrate your passion and vision for your business.

- Use data, evidence, and testimonials to validate your claims and show your potential and impact.
- Highlight your competitive advantage and differentiation, and explain how you can create and sustain value for your customers and investors.
- Be realistic and transparent about your assumptions, risks, and challenges, and show how you can overcome them.
- Be concise and clear, and avoid jargon, acronyms, and technical details that may confuse or bore the investors.
- Prepare for questions and objections, and answer them confidently and respectfully.

HOW TO PITCH TO ANGEL INVESTORS

- Pitching to angel investors requires a simple and persuasive presentation that demonstrates the problem, the solution, the opportunity, the traction, the team, and the ask.
- Some of the tips and best practices for pitching to angel investors are:
  - Network and build relationships with potential angel investors, and get referrals from other entrepreneurs, mentors, or advisors.
  - Show your personality and enthusiasm, and connect with the investors on a personal and emotional level.
  - Use examples, anecdotes, and visuals to illustrate your problem and solution, and show how your product or service works and benefits your customers.

- Focus on the market size and potential, and show how you can reach and acquire your target customers and generate revenue
- Highlight your skills and experience, and show how you and your team are qualified and committed to execute your business plan
- Be honest and humble, and admit your mistakes and weaknesses, and show how you can learn and improve
- Ask for feedback and advice, and listen and respond to the investors’ questions and concerns
